

Andrew Harper

“Andrew Harper” is the pseudonym of the world’s most discriminating traveler. His mission is to discover the finest hotels, resorts and restaurants in order to recommend them to the exceptionally affluent and demanding members of his private travel club, (who typically spend over $75,000 on travel each year and have an average net worth in excess of $12 million).

Andrew Harper’s preference is always for small hideaway properties distinguished by their individual character and personal service.

The first issue of the renowned Hideaway Report newsletter appeared in May 1979. During the subsequent 30 years, there have been just two Andrew Harpers. After a quarter of a century circling the globe, the original Andrew Harper retired and was replaced by his hand-picked successor. Today, Andrew Harper is aided by two Contributing Editors, one based in New York, the other in Paris.

The current Andrew Harper has traveled extensively for more than 20 years. (At last count, he has visited 116 countries, from a total of 192 registered at the United Nations.) He spends approximately a third of each year traveling. His journeys take him to every corner of the world and cost several hundred thousand dollars annually in out-of-pocket expenses.

Andrew Harper is unique in that he always travels incognito and pays the full rate for all accommodations and services. The Hideaway Report newsletter and the The Andrew Harper Collection worldwide hotel and restaurant guide do not accept advertising.

In addition to traveling and writing, Andrew Harper today oversees a private travel club, which offers his members sophisticated and personalized trip-planning assistance.
